

Keeping Air Ambulance Costs Grounded

Air ambulance transportation is very costly. Most non-participating air transport companies charge 500% - 1500% of what Medicare would allow for the same service.

The Situation:

When medically necessary transportation is scheduled and a patient is transported without utilizing an available participating air transport company, State Plan members are left at the mercy of non-participating air transport companies' exorbitantly billed charges.

State Plan benefits will cover up to an allowed amount that is accepted by participating air transport companies, but patients who utilize a non-participating air transport company are often balance billed any remainder, with many owing $20,000 - $50,000 in charges after the State Plan has reimbursed the provider.

The Solution:

Refer to the below list of participating air ambulance companies:

These companies have agreed to accept the allowed amount determined by Allegiance as payment in full and will not balance bill for charges in excess of the allowed amount.
